

POST OFFICE REACHES FIRST CLASS RATING

Approximately $45,000
Worth of Business
Transacted During 1935.

TWO WILL GET SALARY BOOST

With the sale of stamps and stamped envelopes totaling approximately $45,000 in 1935, the Gettysburg postoffice today returned to a first-class rating, Postmaster C. A. Williams announces.

Although the local office's higher rating with the postoffice department in Washington, D. C., became effective today, it will not affect the salaries of the postmaster and his assistant until the beginning of the fiscal year, July 1, 1936.

Get Salary Boost
Under the first-class ranking, the salary of Postmaster Williams will be increased $200 a year, while that of Assistant Postmaster George P. Black will be raised $100 a year.

During the boom days of the late twenties and up to 1932, the Gettysburg postoffice enjoyed first-class rating, but when the depression made itself felt here, the office dropped to second-class.

This is the first time since Postmaster Williams took office on July 4, 1933, that the office has been in the higher classification.

In order to go into first-class, the Gettysburg postoffice was forced to do 10 per cent more business than under previous administrations in Washington.

Before 1933, it was only necessary for a second-class postoffice to do an annual gross stamp and stamped envelope business of $40,000 to reach first-class.

Heavy Xmas Mail
When Postmaster General James A. Farley took over the office, however, he ruled that only 90 per cent of an office's receipts could be taken into account for first-class rating. This ruling required the Gettysburg postoffice to do 10 per cent more business in 1935 to reach first-class than it did to reach the same classification previously.

While business at the local postoffice was better throughout 1935 than 1934, the increased volume of mailing during the recent Christmas season was the deciding factor in boosting the office's classification to first-class, Postmaster Williams said.

18 Fatal Accidents In County During '35

Eighteen persons lost their lives and between 350 and 400 others were injured in automobile accidents in Gettysburg and Adams county during 1935.

While fatalities were spread out over nine months of the year, the greatest casualty list was recorded in July, when four persons lost their lives.

Although automobile accidents resulting in fatalities in Gettysburg and Adams county were five greater in 1935 than a year before, the nation-wide toll of fatal automobile accidents in 1935 was reported slightly less than the year before.

3 Outside County
In addition to the 18 residents of Gettysburg and Adams county who lost their lives in automobile accidents within the county limits last year, three other countians were killed in smashups outside the county, bringing the death toll to 21.

A list of the Gettysburg and Adams county victims last year follows:

David Edward Thomas, Mummasburg street, killed while coasting on West Middle street; Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Rhinehart, East Berlin, hit by car in that borough; Robert W. Gruver, Bethlehem, killed near New Oxford; Miss Zora M. Shields, York street, hit by car on York street; Stanley Cullison, South Washington street, struck by car near his home.

Harry M. Keller, Gettysburg R. D., killed when truck he was driving struck the Marsh Creek bridge; C. N. Spinney, Harrisburg, killed in collision on Lincoln Highway, east of here; Harry W. Culp, Chambersburg street, killed in crash on York street; Mrs. John H. Black, Biglerville, R. 2, killed while returning from picking berries; Mrs. Annie Kozlovsky, Nesquehoning, fatally injured in crash on Harrisburg road; Howard Ware, fatally injured in crash on Harrisburg road, near York Springs; Vincent Daywalt, Iron Springs R. 1, killed in accident near his home.

Other Fatalities

Stanley J. Gangarsky, Mayfield, killed in accident on Harrisburg road; Gerald L. Rice, Carlisle, killed in accident near Brunshtown; Miss Evelyn Bowen, Centerville, Md., and Charles S. Williams, Sykesville, Md., killed in crash near Littlestown; Eugene A. Collins, Two Taverns, killed in crash at Bonneville, and Robert Henck, Darlington, Md., killed in accident in Hampton.

Adams countians who lost their lives in automobile smashups outside the county included John Nicholson, of Irishtown; Donald J. Small, Mt. Pleasant, and the Rev. Father Timothy J. O'Hanrahan.

PENNSYLVANIA HEALTHIER IN 1935 THAN '34

Communicable Diseases Were Greatly Reduced According To Survey.

Pennsylvania's health was far better in 1935 than in the preceding year, figures compiled by the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Department of Health show.

Communicable diseases, the yardstick by which preventive work is measured, were in the main greatly reduced. Only two virulent diseases—infantile paralysis and cerebrospinal meningitis—showed increases, and in both cases the proportion of increase was small as compared with other states.

In 1934 there were 123 cases of infantile paralysis and 26 deaths from it to November 30, 1935, there were 164 cases and only 20 deaths. There were 151 cases of cerebrospinal meningitis reported during 1934 with 52 deaths and 165 cases up to November 30 this year with 95 deaths.

Barring army troops from Pennsylvania during epidemics of infantile paralysis in other states helped to hold down the increase in the disease to a minimum.

Chicken-pox was reduced from 26,525 cases in 1934 to 22,176 cases reported to November 30. Diphtheria dropped from 2,330 to 1,557; measles, 68,710 to 56,940; mumps, 17,039 to 15,100; scarlet fever, 20,727 to 14,627; tuberculosis, 4,907 to 4,182 and whooping cough, from 22,343 to 9,762.

Typhoid Fever Declines

The number of reported cases of typhoid fever dropped from 933 to 492 in spite of a serious outbreak of the disease in Philadelphia, caused by a carrier. Spread of the disease was prevented through the efforts of the Department of Health's Bureau of Engineering.

Up to November, thirteen new public water supplies were installed throughout the state, improvements were made to fifteen existing supplies and twenty-six new chlorinators were installed under the direction of the Bureau of Engineering.

The annual payroll of the Department of Health on November 15 showed savings to the State of $153,102 over last year, or approximately $300,000 for the biennium. Traveling expenses of employees of the department were reduced $34,455.17. Savings were made by eliminating positions which duplicated work of others and by reductions in salaries. The Department of Health employed 1,819 persons on January 15 and 1,667 on November 15.

DEMOCRATS OF COUNTY EXPECT TO HEAL BREAK

Special Election for Chairman, January
13, Will Decide Difference.

3 OFFICIALS TO CONDUCT VOTING

The open break among leaders of the Adams county democratic committee which has split the party wide open is expected to be permanently healed on Monday, January 13, when a special election will be held to select a county chairman.

Announcement of the special election was made by State Chairman David Lawrence, in Harrisburg, Tuesday afternoon, following a long conference with leaders of the party who had reached a parting of the ways over the recent election of District Attorney John P. Butt as chairman.

The difference grew out of the purported resignation of F. X. Colgan, director of the bureau of corporations and associate judge of the Adams county courts, at an executive committee meeting some time ago.

No announcement of Mr. Colgan's resignation was made at that time.

Challenge Legality

On December 14 a meeting of the committee was held in the court house. The meeting was called on petition of more than 50 per cent of the committee membership, according to those in charge of the meeting, while the Colgan adherents challenged this assertion.

The meeting resounded itself into heated arguments and open discussions relative to the legality of the meeting and the challenge that Colgan had and had not resigned.

Some Colgan followers bolted the meeting and in the resultant election Mr. Butt received 47 votes for county chairman with six cast against him.

Agree To Election

The Colgan adherents challenged Mr. Butt's election and took their case to the state executive committee.

State Chairman Lawrence and the state committee met with the leaders of the two factions from Adams county and after a long hearing the special election was decided upon. Both factions agreed to this decision and January 13 was set as the date.

The three members of the state executive committee will come to Gettysburg. The credentials of each of the 109 members of the county executive committee will be carefully scrutinized before the election. The three officials will conduct the election and the result, according to leaders on both sides, will be accepted as final.

WPA Office Moves To Chambersburg

Announcement was made today that the local office of the work's progress administration on the second floor of the Murphy building will be moved to Chambersburg next Monday. No further announcement was forthcoming, and it is not known how works' projects will be handled in Gettysburg and Adams county in the future.

A Happy and Prosperous New Year

HEADNURSE AT CAMP COLT IN 1917-18 EXPIRES

Mrs. Grace Guyon
Kempler, Active During Flu Epidemic,
Passes Away.

OTHER DEATHS ARE ANNOUNCED

Mrs. Grace Guyon Kempler, 63, wife of Dr. J. E. Kempler, practicing physician of Chambersburg, died Tuesday in Johns Hopkins hospital at Baltimore when she had undergone an operation a week ago.

A native of Sioux City, Iowa, Mrs. Kempler was graduated from the nurses training school of the Johns Hopkins hospital in 1899.

She was interested in community welfare work in Chambersburg and was responsible for the establishment of the public health nursing service. She was active in Red Cross work.

Worked At Army Camp
During the World war Mrs. Kempler had charge of the nursing personnel at Camp Colt, here, at the time of the influenza epidemic.

Being an ardent believer of woman suffrage, she opened a campaign in Chambersburg at a time when the movement was not yet popular.

Surviving are her husband and their three children: Guyton, Richard, both of Waynesboro, and Julius, Jr., of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and a sister, Sister Mary Carolino, of Chicago.

Funeral services at the Kraiss Brothers' funeral home, Chambersburg, Friday at 2 p. m. in charge of the Rev. G. D. Graeff of the Trinity Lutheran church. Burial will be in the cemetery at Fort Loudon, near the Kempler mountain home.

Mrs. George Kling
Mrs. Charlotte Kate Kling, wife of George Kling, died at her home at Smith Station at 8 o'clock Monday night. She was stricken while eating her evening meal at 5 o'clock.

Dr. Spurgeon T. Shaw, Spring Grove, was summoned and found her suffering from apoplexy. She did not regain consciousness after being stricken.

Mrs. Kling, who was a daughter of the late George and Alice Schrum Miller, Spring Grove, is survived by her husband and eight children: Mrs. Edward Luckenbaugh, near Seven Valleys; Mrs. George Rehrbaugh, Hanover, and Florence, Paul, Alice, Esther, Charlotte and Ralph, at home. She also leaves two sisters, Mrs. Percy Berkeimer, near Stoverstown, and Mrs. Ralph Gelsman, Gettysburg; a half sister, Miss Minnie Miller, York, and a half-brother, Willis Miller, Yoe.

Funeral services at 1:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, with brief services at her home and concluding services in the Mt. Carmel Lutheran church. The Rev. B. K. Mowrer, supply pastor of the Mt. Carmel church, will officiate. Burial will be in the Spring Grove cemetery.

PAST GRANDS TO MEET

The January meeting of the Past Grands' association, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, will be held Friday evening, Montana lodge, No. 653, Bendersville, being the host lodge.

Her Past (Ah! the Pity of It!) Robs Ruby Bae of WPA Job

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 1 (AP)

—The winter cold of Minnesota's CCC camps will not be warned next week by a glimpse of fan dancer Ruby Bae, although WPA officials admitted Tuesday that only "adverse" publicity caused Ruby's repudiation by Government agencies.

According to the vaudeville section of the WPA, under whose auspices Ruby was to have appeared before the young men enrolled in Conservation Corps, Ruby's act was approved when she appeared before WPA critics, and then disappeared when it was discovered Ruby had been fined on disorderly conduct charges.

Rehearsed With Others
"She rehearsed with other performers at the WPA headquarters," Miss Enza Zeller, who is supervising or of the WPA vaudeville section, explained Tuesday afternoon. "She was in a dance team. She wore a floor length gown and there was nothing risqué about her lines or act. Unfortunately, because of adverse publicity around her night club entertainment, we could not assign her to the project, although she is eligible for employment in the WPA."

The unavailability of Miss Bae, however, will not leave the young men of the CCC camps stranded, as other acts—comedians, an accordion player, tap dancers, a banjoist, Scotch dialect singers, a magician, a balancing and juggling act and singers of popular songs and ballads, have been engaged to assist in whiling away the tedium of CCC life, according to Miss Zeller.

Arrest Bars Her

Miss Bae was prevented from joining this group, Miss Zeller explained, because she had been arrested and convicted on disorderly conduct charges following a performance in a local night club, during which it was testified, Miss Bae wore no clothes. Toward the end, police said, even the formality of a fan was waived.

The troupe which starts its performance January 9 at the Hinckley, (Minnesota) CCC camp could perform anywhere without offending the most prudish persons, Miss Zeller declared. Two St. Paul churches have already approved the group which is expected to lighten the winter days for the CCC workers.

Meanwhile Miss Bae is—at least temporarily—definitely not affiliated with the WPA, officials say. Her place has been filled with banjoists, Scotch singers and other performers without fans.

Auto Tag Rule In Effect Today

Automobile registrations in 1935 will surpass last year's all-time high record by approximately 60,000 licenses, the Bureau of Motor Vehicles predicted today. Registrations in 1935 totaled 1,232,562.

About 60,000 tags were issued by the bureau Tuesday. Sixteen thousand sets of plates were handed out over the counter as a last minute rush of applicants jammed the offices at the Capitol. Approximately 80,000 sets of tags were distributed to motor-ists on Monday in person or through the mails.

Approximately 70 per cent of the total registration of the year are usually issued prior to New Year's Day, said W. J. B. Winters, director of the bureau.

Meanwhile, highway patrolmen were preparing to enforce the regulations governing 1936 licenses. The patrol warned yesterday that motorists who did not have the new tags attached to their automobiles by midnight would be arrested if they ventured on the highways.

KILLS COUSIN; KNIFES UNCLE

14-Year-Old Youth Said To Have Admitted Hammering Boy to Death.

Union City, N. J., Jan. 1 (AP)—Jerry May, 14, was held by police Tuesday night after admitting, they said, he had killed his six-year-old cousin to death and critically slashed the child's father.

Deputy Chief Edward J. Mescall said May admitted attacking his cousin, Sergio Sciarra, with a hammer, and his uncle, Joseph Sciarra, 32, with a knife at their home Tuesday.

The boy, whom Mrs. Nancy Sciarra described as a "frequent visitor, good boy, and firm friend" of the family, came to the Sciarra home Tuesday and asked for money to aid him, she said, in running away from home. She said she refused and he went outside to play with Sergio. Then she sent her husband to talk to the boy, she said.

Hearing a crash a short time later, she told police, she investigated and found her husband wounded in the chest. May, she said, ran to telephone the hospital and while he was gone she found her son unconscious. His head had been badly beaten. The child died a few hours later in North Hudson hospital.

Deputy Chief Mescall and detectives found May at his home and there, they said, they also found the knife and hammer with which they said he told them he had assaulted his cousin and uncle.

May was held on an open charge at the Parental Home in Bayonne.

Fierce Kea Birds Prey on Flocks

Wellington, N. Z. (AP)—New Zealand sheep farmers have asked for government aid in destroying the kea bird, one of the worst pests the sheep farmer must contend with. The birds alight on the backs of the sheep, digging sharp beaks into their victims until they reach the kidney fat, which they devour. Thousands of sheep have been killed in this manner each year. The birds previously kept to the higher country, but have of late followed the flocks to the low country.

PITT IS PLACED ON "BLACKLIST"

President Bowman's Administration Said to Breed Fear in Faculty.

St. Louis, Jan. 1 (AP)—As the first step in a renewed drive for "academic freedom of speech and tenure of office," the American Association of University Professors Tuesday voted unanimously to place the University of Pittsburgh on its ineligible list.

Rejecting pleas by two of the university's professors, the convention affirmed the report of an investigating committee that the administration of Chancellor John G. Bowman had created an atmosphere of "fear, uncertainty and intimidation" among the faculty.

Dr. Ralph E. Hinstead, of Syracuse university, chairman of an investigating committee, told the delegates "the administration of Doctor Bowman is inimical to the ideals of this association."

Cites Turner Ouster He said "the least serious question involved" was the dismissal from Pitt of Dr. Ralph D. Turner for expressing religious views Chancellor Bowman regarded as "subversive."

It was Doctor Turner's discharge that caused the association to undertake the investigation.

Doctor Hinstead declared the "almost universal testimony of one hundred professors interviewed by the committee was that an atmosphere of fear, uncertainty and intimidation surrounds the faculty there."

Not only, he asserted, was there "suppression of academic expression on social and economic issues," but "there is suppression of freedom of speech about the administration of ordinary university affairs."

Brands Administration "We are not branding the university as a whole," Doctor Hinstead declared. "We are merely branding its present administration. If there is any university whose administration deserves to be put on the ineligible list, it is the University of Pittsburgh."

Dr. Robert T. Hance and Dr. Marion O. McKay, of the Pitt faculty, spoke against the ineligibility recommendation of Dr. Carl Witke, of Ohio State university, chairman of the association's committee on academic freedom and tenure.

Doctor McKay praised the progress of the university in the last 15 years and asked that the association consider the fact that adoption of the resolution would retard Pitt's growth.

Sees Slow Improvement "The good of the university outweighs its shortcomings," Doctor Hance said. "The university is situated in a great industrial center, a center steeped in conversation, and a change will have to come slowly."

Andrew W. Mellon, former secretary of the treasury, is one of the university trustees. Removal of the university from the ineligible list prevents members of its faculty from being admitted to the association in the future. The status of present faculty members belonging to the association will not be affected.

JUDGE PONDER'S GIRL'S APPEAL

Jurist Takes Under Advice-ment Plea for New Trial For Edith Maxwell.

Wise, Va., Jan. 1 (AP)—Edith Maxwell was given some measure of hope Tuesday in her bid for freedom when Judge H. A. W. Sken took under advisement her second petition to set aside the verdict which sentenced her to twenty-five years in prison for the murder of her father and grant her a new trial.

Saying there were three points which he wished to consider, Judge Sken told counsel that he would hold the present term of court open until January 15 for this particular case. Previously, on December 12, he had denied a motion for a new trial—a motion based on six allegations of error by the court.

The question of new evidence was one of the three issues on which the judge said he had an open mind. He wanted to consider, he said, whether a microscopic study of the brain of Trigg Maxwell, Edith's father, would reveal new and material evidence.

Under consideration also was the question whether the Virginia statute prescribing that only males can sit on grand juries and trial juries is in conflict with the law which enfranchised women and gave them all privileges of full citizenship.

Furthermore, Judge Sken said, he wanted to consider whether the "short form of indictment" is constitutional and not in conflict with the constitution of the United States and of Virginia. The short form of indictment, authorized by the general assembly of Virginia, permits a brief form of indictment, charging guilt, without going into all of the details of the crime alleged. In authorizing this short form the general assembly said, however, that the defense was privileged whenever it so desired to order a bill of particulars.

Supreme Court Goes Modern; Appoints Press Contact Man

Washington, Jan. 1.—The supreme court made another surrender Tuesday to a modern demand—and appointed a "press contact man," the tribunal's first in the 146 years of existence.

Veteran court employees, who explained the appointment in the absence of an official announcement, emphasized that the new official was neither a "press agent" nor a "public relations counselor."

HELD TRESPASSER; MAN SHOVELS OUT OF 30-DAY SENTENCE

Rockville, Md., Jan. 1 (AP)—A heavy snowstorm proved a blessing to George Howard, prisoner, because it gave him a chance to shovel his way to freedom.

Held on a trespassing charge Monday, Howard was given a choice of shoveling off the courthouse sidewalk or thirty days.

"I'll take the shovel," he said. Outside he found to his dismay that the sidewalk was a quarter mile long but he finished the job.

Two Restrictions Upon Jews Go Into Effect in Germany

Berlin, Jan. 1 (AP)—Jews of Germany, stripped of citizenship rights during 1935, said farewell Tuesday to their Gentile maids under 35, who are forbidden to work for them after today.

Simultaneously, all Jewish government employees were pensioned and left their offices for the last time.

The number of persons involved in these latest of a series of anti-Semitic measures was not ascertained. New Year's Eve also found a Protestant pastor under house arrest here because he is a quarter-Jew, he retains full citizenship under the Nuremberg laws.

3 CHILDREN BURN TO DEATH

Authorities Conduct Investigation Into Covington (Va.) Conflagration.

Covington, Va., Jan. 1 (AP)—Authorities Tuesday night pushed an investigation of the fire early Tuesday which burned to death three children and injured six other persons as they leaped from a blazing frame dwelling.

The dead, children of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lacks, were: William Lacks, 9; Lawrence Lacks, 6, and a two-days-old baby girl.

Allegheny county citizens gathered here in a mass meeting Tuesday in an effort to raise funds for the grief-stricken father and mother. Their household belongings were not insured but the building, which was occupied by several families, was owned by the McAllister estate.

Thought Caused By Stove Belief that the blaze which swept quickly through the home at about 1 a. m. began from the explosion of an oil stove was expressed by firemen. The oil stove had been used as an auxiliary heater during the sub-freezing weather of the past week, it was said.

The mother of the three children, bed-ridden at the time of the fire, was unable to save the baby who was sleeping with her. The father, who was working on the night shift of a paper mill near by, raced to the scene but was too late to save his children.

Rescued by Neighbors Mrs. Lacks was rescued by neighbors, who placed ladders to the second-story window. She was said at the hospital Tuesday night to be suffering from burns about her face and feet, severe shock and exposure.

Benny Lacks, 15, a son, sustained a fractured ankle when he jumped from a window into the snow below, while Douglas Cooper and Lowell Worth escaped with minor injuries. Seventeen persons were asleep in the building when the fire occurred.

The alarm was first given by a woman neighbor who said she was awakened by the sound of an explosion and saw smoke pouring from the first floor of the part of the large dwelling occupied by the Lacks.

Firemen found a fire plug near the home frozen and after an unsuccessful attempt to place a line to the nearby Jackson river ultimately obtained water from a plug several blocks away.

SCIENTISTS SEE "SPACE ROCKET"

Some Believe Projectile May Go Aloft 100 Miles to Become Meteor.

St. Louis, Jan. 1 (AP)—The "space rocket" which Dr. Robert H. Goddard is building on the mesas of New Mexico was hailed by his fellow scientists here Tuesday as solving the problem of going up perhaps one hundred miles and possibly leaving the earth entirely to become a "free meteor."

They saw for the first time a motion picture of this long, lean object driving straight upward with a stubby apron of continuous flame at its tail, and flashes like exploding shells far back in its wake, where occasional unburned bits of its fuel exploded harmlessly.

Dr. Goddard only would say he is making a rocket to sound the earth's atmosphere at heights more than now possible.

Wild Dream Coming True But colleagues who have worked with him for years told the assembled scientists he had solved the problem of rocket flight and that the dazzling heights heretofore a more or less wild dream can be safely predicted in the near future.

Dr. Goddard showed the motion pictures and described his rocket at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. His picture closed with a flight of 7,500 feet at 500 miles an hour. The rocket returned safely to earth by means of an automatic parachute.

"Can you send rockets up fifty miles?" was the first question asked.

"I'd rather not say," replied Dr. Goddard.

Thereupon, Dr. C. G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, who was one of Dr. Goddard's first sponsors for this rocket twenty years ago, asked:

Could Be 100 Miles "Might it not be a hundred miles as easily as fifty?"

Dr. Goddard nodded affirmatively. "That is," Dr. Abbot continued, "it is as easy to underestimate as overestimate. The heights to which you can go now are mostly a question of obtaining money for further work."

MEXICAN EMISSARY TALKS WITH MORGENTHAU

Washington, Jan. 1 (AP)—Mexico's perturbation at the panicky condition of world silver market was placed before Henry Morgenthau, Jr., secretary of the treasury, Tuesday by Eduardo Saurer, finance minister.

With prices off 15 cents since the treasury quit buying the huge quantities of metal in principal financial centers, the two began a series of conferences which may have an important bearing on the future of silver in the Mexican monetary system.

For nearly an hour they and their aides conferred in Secretary Morgenthau's office. Saurer declined to comment as he left, but Mr. Morgenthau said they had had a "successful talk in preliminary conversations."

Senators from silver-producing states as well as diplomatic and treasury officials will meet the Mexican emissary at a dinner to be given by Secretary Morgenthau tonight.

NEVER MIND THE LADY

by David Garth

NEVER MIND THE LADY JAN 2
SYNOPSIS: Terry Willett is battling fiercely for the sake of Allaire West, who froze him out the last time he saw her. But LaMarr, Terry's victim, is trying to blackmail Allaire's father, lying that the man Allaire shot in a certain tropical port had died. And Allaire has been checking up on Terry's past, in Carteret, Va., quite innocent of all the trouble and scandal she has caused. LaMarr has lost his revolver, and is fighting hand to hand.

Chapter 33 SURPRISE

Terry turned sideways just in time. LaMarr retreated a few steps and picked up a table lamp. He flung it at Terry's face.

Again Terry was just a split second ahead of him. And always he came on steadily, relentlessly, half-blinded by the blood from the gash in his forehead, but always coming on.

A table went over, a chair was broken. They mixed it in the middle of the floor, LaMarr trying to jab a thumb in Willett's eye, gouging, fighting with fists, nails, teeth, and knees.

But all those tricks had been tried on the tall auburn-haired American at one time or another; some of them had worked once, but never twice.

He weathered the savage, desperate onslaughts with the sheer fury of his iron fists and the spirit that had been born from many fights in many places with all kinds of opponents.

Terry beat LaMarr to his knees. LaMarr's left eyebrow was hanging loose and a cheekbone was shattered. Willett grabbed him by the shoulders and hauled him to his feet. LaMarr sagged helpless in his grip, his knees buckling, his breath and heart and strength gone.

Willett saw that he was through. He released him and LaMarr sank down and fell over backwards, something crawly and shapeless and half blind.

"That's that," said Willett.

He wasn't in such good shape himself. His head reeled dizzy, one eye was blinded, and his ribs on one side ached from a bruising kick, but LaMarr had learned not to deal with a roughneck.

A roughneck! Yes, it was in her eyes, the eyes of a white-faced girl staring at the scene in that shambled room in horror. Good God! Had his brain been jarred loose from its moorings. Why, she was standing there on the threshold—Allaire West! He must be crazy.

But he wasn't crazy.

"Allaire!" Fox and Rayburne West nearly shouted the name.

The girl looked at the battered thing on the floor and then at the tall man standing nearby with blood streaming over one eye, his face still set in fighting mask.

Disgust and shock and horror. There went the works. Her father was trying to get her attention.

"Where have you been?"

Her mouth curved briefly.

"If I told you, you wouldn't believe it. I can hardly believe it myself."

Terry Willett looked at her, tilting his head back to clear his vision.

"So you disappeared. Just like that. Just went off without a word, and now you come back and can hardly believe it yourself. Where did you ever get the crazy idea you could do things like that? Or don't you care about the worry and trouble you cause, detectives running around all over the place and people tying themselves in knots trying to find you? But you probably will never see that. You're too used to doing what you want and to hell with everybody else. And now good night, all."

"Wait a minute, Terry!" It was Fox's voice. "You can't go out like that. Your head—"

Attaboy, George, the lamp of reason.

"Mere scratch," said Willett briefly.

He strode out of the room and out of the house. Outside, he drew a long breath of cool night air. He needed it. Well, that was that, all right. Boy, he'd certainly shot the works.

But what difference did it make? Fox was there—and Fox wasn't a killer or a roughneck—he was a gentleman and a rising young Foreign Officer. He was of her world, born to the purple and when he saw a snake he stepped over it and not on it. Good old Fox.

"Look out, Terry, he's armed!" Fox would die in his bed surrounded by great-grandchildren. The lamp of reason.

Terry was bareheaded and he knew he probably looked as though he'd just returned from the wars, but he hailed a taxi and bore the driver's astonished stare with composure.

"Gosh, Mac, what hit you? Want a doc?"

"Either that or some adhesive tape."

"Get in, boss, get in. I know a good doc."

Terry got in. He leaned back against the cushions and propped his feet up on one of the little side seats.

How are the Giants doing?" he murmured.

Bright sun was flooding the room when he awoke the next day. His head felt as though it had been hit with a collection of assorted sandbags. Had he been drunk last night?

He pondered. No, he'd been slugged with something, that was right. A merry life, yea, truly; never a dull moment.

He looked at his wrist watch. Almost noon. Something was due to happen today. Oh, yes—he had to take a plane at Newark Airport for Miami and the Pan-American Airways.

He got up and went over to the mirror where he regarded himself critically. He wasn't exactly a picture of beauty, with a discoloration around one eye and his forehead bandaged with several strips of surgical tape, and when he took a deep breath the ribs on one side ached. Well, don't take any deep breaths.

He showered and dressed quickly. Terry Willett dressed well in an easy natural way. He presented a smart, clean-cut appearance in dark double-breasted, blue shirt, wine-colored cravat, and his thick auburn hair crisply parted.

Then with his bags packed and his topcoat under arm, he paused by the table and picked up Puff Harrington's note. She'd evidently left it there right after he and Fox had gone out of the room last evening. There were two words hurriedly scrawled, "Thanks, Terry." Sic transit Puff.

You're welcome, babe. It didn't cost you anything but a cigarette case. Some detective's wife has that "evidence" now probably. He smiled slightly and tore the note into bits, letting the pieces filter through his fingers.

As he closed the door behind him and turned the key in the lock, he heard his home ring. He hesitated a moment; who'd be calling him? Puff, maybe?

Well, whoever it was he didn't think it worth the effort to unlock the door and go back. What was the use? He let the phone ring. Terry Willett wanted to get away from here.

He had a short breakfast and then went to the desk to pay his bill. The phone girl said there's been a call for him; no message. The party had been very eager to locate him and the phone girl had said Mr. Willett was leaving for Newark Airport shortly.

"Hope you have a nice trip, Mr. Willett," she smiled. She was very pretty and lots of men stopped by to talk about the telephone situation. It was just her luck that when one came along with whom she'd have liked to discuss the telephone situation, he wasn't interested in the telephone situation.

Black eye and bandaged brow, but that warlike-looking young man was a real gent, though the telephone girl.

Willett arrived at the airport and the big tri-motored ship was already waiting, the sun shining on its silver body with a flood of gleaming reflections. The Miami plane! Coming Corrigan.

With his foot on the step, he heard his name called.

"Terry—!"

He turned to see Allaire coming toward him swiftly. She seemed breathless and there was a touch of high color in her face. She reached his side and put a hand on his arm.

"You're not going, Terry? Not back to South America?"

He looked at her curiously.

"Why, of course."

"You might have come around to say good-bye."

He laughed shortly.

"I said good-bye last night—words and music."

"Let's get out of here," said Allaire, as a portly passenger waited impatiently to get aboard.

"Five minutes, sir," said the plane steward to Willett.

"More than enough," said Willett, and walked to one side. Allaire seemed to have something to say, but couldn't quite say it.

"If it's about last night" said Willett, "forget it."

"Oh, Terry, you can't go like this after all you've done. I wanted to talk to you last night, but you didn't give me a chance. It was grand of you to take my part, to sock that beastly swine."

ON THE Right Foot

TOO MANY of the New Year's resolutions we make are negatives — "don'ts" — silly to begin with, and impossible to keep.

Yet the impulse to make the new year better than the old one is almost irresistible when we face the clean expanse of a fresh calendar.

Let's get off on the right foot this year. Let's combine our ambition with common sense. There are things we can do — constructive, positive things — that will make 1936 a year we can be proud of. One of them is to live within our budgets.

That doesn't mean skimping and doing without. It means deciding on our needs and getting the most for what we pay.

Resolve now to buy wisely—to read the advertisements in this newspaper regularly—to know in advance what you can afford to buy and where to buy it. Compare prices and values in the advertising pages first. Make every dollar do more. Then step forward into 1936 with assurance.

KILLS COUSIN; KNIFES UNCLE

14-Year-Old Youth Said To Have Admitted Hammering Boy to Death.

Union City, N. J., Jan. 1 (AP)—Jerry May, 14, was held by police Tuesday night after admitting, they said, he hammered his six-year-old cousin to death and critically slashed the child's father.

Deputy Chief Edward J. Mescall said May admitted attacking his cousin, Sergio Sciarra, with a hammer, and his uncle, Joseph Sciarra, 32, with a knife at their home Tuesday.

The boy, whom Mrs. Nancy Sciarra described as a "frequent visitor, good boy, and firm friend" of the family, came to the Sciarra home Tuesday and asked for money to aid him, she said, in running away from home. She said she refused and he went outside to play with Sergio. Then she sent her husband to talk to the boy, she said.

Hearing a crash a short time later, she told police, she investigated and found her husband wounded in the chest. May, she said, ran to telephone the hospital and while he was gone she found her son unconscious. His head had been badly beaten. The child died a few hours later in North Hudson hospital.

Deputy Chief Mescall and detectives found May at his home and there, they said, they also found the knife and hammer with which they said he told them he had assaulted his cousin and uncle.

May was held on an open charge at the Parental Home in Bayonne.

Fierce Kea Birds Prey on Flocks

Wellington, N. Z. (AP)—New Zealand sheep farmers have asked for government aid in destroying the kea bird, one of the worst pests the sheep farmer must contend with.

The birds alight on the backs of the sheep, digline sharp beaks into their victims until they reach the kidney fat, which they devour.

Thousands of sheep have been killed in this manner each year. The birds previously kept to the higher country, but have of late followed the flocks to the low country.

PITT IS PLACED ON "BLACKLIST"

President Bowman's Administration Said to Breed Fear in Faculty.

St. Louis, Jan. 1 (AP)—As the first step in a renewed drive for "academic freedom of speech and tenure of office," the American Association of University Professors Tuesday voted unanimously to place the University of Pittsburgh on its ineligible list.

Rejecting pleas by two of the university's professors, the convention affirmed the report of an investigating committee that the administration of Chancellor John G. Bowman had created an atmosphere of "fear, uncertainty and intimidation" among the faculty.

Dr. Ralph E. Hinstead, of Syracuse university, chairman of an investigating committee, told the delegates "the administration of Doctor Bowman is inimical to the ideals of this association."

Cites Turner Ouster He said "the least serious question involved" was the dismissal from Pitt of Dr. Ralph D. Turner for expressing religious views Chancellor Bowman regarded as "subversive."

It was Doctor Turner's discharge that caused the association to undertake the investigation.

Doctor Hinstead declared the "almost universal testimony of one hundred professors interviewed by the committee was that an atmosphere of fear, uncertainty and intimidation surrounds the faculty there."

Not only, he asserted, was there "suppression of academic expression on social and economic issues," but "there is suppression of freedom of speech about the administration of ordinary university affairs."

Brands Administration "We are not branding the university as a whole," Doctor Hinstead declared. "We are merely branding its present administration. If there is any university whose administration deserves to be put on the ineligible list, it is the University of Pittsburgh."

Dr. Robert T. Hance and Dr. Marion O. McKay, of the Pitt faculty, spoke against the ineligible recommendation of Dr. Carl Wittke, of Ohio State university, chairman of the association's committee on academic freedom and tenure.

Doctor McKay praised the progress of the university in the last 15 years and asked that the association consider the fact that adoption of the resolution would retard Pitt's growth.

Sees Slow Improvement "The good of the university outweighs its shortcomings," Doctor Hance said. "The university is situated in a great industrial center, a center steeped in conversation, and a change will have to come slowly."

Andrew W. Mellon, former secretary of the treasury, is one of the university trustees.

Removal of the university from the ineligible list prevents members of its faculty from being admitted to the association in the future. The status of present faculty members belonging to the association will not be affected.

JUDGE PONDER'S GIRL'S APPEAL

Jurist Takes Under Advice-ment Plea for New Trial For Edith Maxwell.

Wise, Va., Jan. 1 (AP)—Edith Maxwell was given some measure of hope Tuesday in her bid for freedom when Judge H. A. W. Skeen took under advisement her second petition to set aside the verdict which sentenced her to twenty-five years in prison for the murder of her father and grant her a new trial.

Saying there were three points which he wished to consider, Judge Skeen told counsel that he would hold the present term of court open until January 15 for this particular case. Previously, on December 12, he had denied a motion for a new trial—a motion based on six allegations of error by the court.

The question of new evidence was one of the three issues on which the judge said he had an open mind. He wanted to consider, he said, whether a microscopic study of the brain of Trigg Maxwell, Edith's father, would reveal new and material evidence.

Under consideration also was the question whether the Virginia statute prescribing that only males can sit on grand juries and trial juries is in conflict with the law which enfranchised women and gave them all privileges of full citizenship.

Furthermore, Judge Skeen said, he wanted to consider whether the "short form of indictment" is constitutional and not in conflict with the constitution of the United States and of Virginia. The short form of indictment, authorized by the general assembly of Virginia, permits a brief form of indictment, charging guilt, without going into all of the details of the crime alleged. In authorizing this short form the general assembly said, however, that the defense was privileged whenever it so desired to order a bill of particulars.

Supreme Court Goes Modern; Appoints Press Contact Man

Washington, Jan. 1.—The supreme court made another surrender Tuesday to a modern demand—and appointed a "press contact man," the tribunal's first in the 146 years of existence.

Veteran court employee, who explained the appointment in the absence of an official announcement, emphasized that the new official was neither a "press agent" nor a "public relations counselor."

And contrasting with younger government agencies, where "press agents" seldom are known by that title, the court attaches added that there would be no "handouts," or "press releases."

They explained that Nelson A. Potter, of the clerk's staff, had been designated to handle queries from hundreds of newswriters seeking information on court moves that have captured public attention, especially since the new deal controversies began pouring into the tribunal.

Potter has worked in the clerk's office for eight years and recently had been "minute clerk." He now will devote all his time to the press.

Clerk Charles Elmore Cropley said Potter had been designated as a result of numerous requests made by a committee of newswriters. This group, he said, had met several times in recent months with Chief Justice Hughes for informal conferences on the request.

The appointment became known when Potter moved his desk and file cases into the larger of two rooms assigned to the press in the basement of the new $11,500,000 supreme court building.

Cropley said Potter will maintain a complete set of briefs, opinions and other court records for convenience of newsmen. He added the move was a natural result of the shift of the court from its cramped quarters in the capitol to its own building.

This transfer had aided the work of newswriters previously. Pneumatic tubes now link directly the desks for the press in the courtroom with telephone and telegraph facilities on the floor below. Thus, the outside world and newspaper readers can learn within a fraction of a minute what the justices say and do on historic cases.

FEDERAL JUDGE RULES AGAINST COAL ACT

Kansas City, Jan. 1 (AP)—Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves ruled Tuesday the Guffey coal act was unconstitutional because, he said, a tax it imposed would coerce coal producing companies to submit to federal regulation.

The ruling was the first outright opinion holding the act unconstitutional although, Judge Reeves said, several federal judges in granting injunctions to coal mining companies had expressed doubt as to constitutionality of the law.

Constitutionality of the act was upheld in Kentucky. A case challenging its validity is now pending before the United States supreme court.

Judge Reeves granted injunctions sought by six Western Missouri coal producing companies to restrain imposition of the tax on them.

Two Restrictions Upon Jews Go Into Effect in Germany

Berlin, Jan. 1 (AP)—Jews of Germany, stripped of citizenship rights during 1935, said farewell Tuesday to their Gentile maids under 35, who are forbidden to work for them after today.

Simultaneously, all Jewish government employees were pensioned and left their offices for the last time.

The number of persons involved in these latest of a series of anti-Semitic measures was not ascertained.

New Year's Eve also found a Protestant pastor under house arrest here because he is a quarter-Jew. The Rev. Gerhard Jacobi, who was prevented last week from conducting Christmas services, was compelled to stay in his home Tuesday night and today to prevent his preaching in Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial church, one of Berlin's largest.

The "house arrest" was made at the request of local party bosses of Berlin's west end, who declared it intolerable that a man of Jewish origin should preach, on these festive occasions.

The Rev. Jacobi is the bearer of an iron cross for valor during the world war. Since he is only a quarter-Jew, he retains full citizenship under the Nurnberg laws.

The domestic-service law, applicable also to foreigners, is raising new problems which are worrying embassies, including the American.

Protests were expected, for the law treats American Jews differently from American Aryans. The embassy is taking the position that treaties with Germany call for equal treatment of all citizens of the given country.

3 CHILDREN BURN TO DEATH

Authorities Conduct Investigation Into Covington (Va.) Conflagration.

Covington, Va., Jan. 1 (AP)—Authorities Tuesday night pushed an investigation of the fire early Tuesday which burned to death three children and injured six other persons as they leaped from a blazing frame dwelling.

The dead, children of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lacks, were: William Lacks, 9; Lawrence Lacks, 6, and a two-days-old baby girl.

Allegheny county citizens gathered here in a mass meeting Tuesday in an effort to raise funds for the grief-stricken father and mother. Their household belongings were not insured but the building, which was occupied by several families, was owned by the McAllister estate.

Thought Caused By Stove Belief that the blaze which swept quickly through the home at about 1 a. m. began from the explosion of an oil stove was expressed by firemen. The oil stove had been used as an auxiliary heater during the sub-freezing weather of the past week, it was said.

The mother of the three children, bed-ridden at the time of the fire, was unable to save the baby who was sleeping with her. The father, who was working on the night shift of a paper mill near by, raced to the scene but was too late to save his children.

Rescued by Neighbors Mrs. Lacks was rescued by neighbors, who placed ladders to the second-story window. She was said at the hospital Tuesday night to be suffering from burns about her face and feet, severe shock and exposure.

Benny Lacks, 15, a son, sustained a fractured ankle when he jumped from a window into the snow below, while Douglas Cooper and Lowell Worth escaped with minor injuries. Seventeen persons were asleep in the building when the fire occurred.

The alarm was first given by a woman neighbor who said she was awakened by the sound of an explosion and saw smoke pouring from the first floor of the part of the large dwelling occupied by the Lacks.

Firemen found a fire plug near the home frozen and after an unsuccessful attempt to place a line to the nearby Jackson river ultimately obtained water from a plug several blocks away.

SCIENTISTS SEE "SPACE ROCKET"

Some Believe Projectile May Go Aloft 100 Miles to Become Meteor.

St. Louis, Jan. 1 (AP)—The "space rocket" which Dr. Robert H. Goddard is building on the mesas of New Mexico was hailed by his fellow scientists here Tuesday as solving the problem of going up perhaps one hundred miles and possibly leaving the earth entirely to become a "free meteor."

They saw for the first time a motion picture of this long, lean object driving straight upward with a stubby apron of continuous flame at its tail, and flashes like exploding shells far back in its wake, where occasional unburned bits of its fuel exploded harmlessly.

Dr. Goddard only would say he is making a rocket to sound the earth's atmosphere at heights more than now possible.

Wild Dream Coming True But colleagues who have worked with him for years told the assembled scientists he had solved the problem of rocket flight and that the dazzling heights heretofore a more or less wild dream can be safely predicted in the near future.

Dr. Goddard showed the motion pictures and described his rocket at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. His picture closed with a flight of 7,500 feet at 500 miles an hour. The rocket returned safely to earth by means of an automatic parachute.

"Can you send rockets up fifty miles?" was the first question asked.

"I'd rather not say," replied Dr. Goddard.

Thereupon, Dr. C. G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, who was one of Dr. Goddard's first sponsors for this rocket twenty years ago, asked:

Could Be 100 Miles "Might it not be a hundred miles as easily as fifty?"

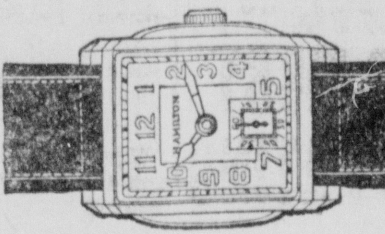

Dr. Goddard nodded affirmatively. "That is," Dr. Abbot continued, "it is as easy to underestimate as overestimate. The heights to which you can go now are mostly a question of obtaining money for further work."

Spain Acquires Diesel Trains Madrid (AP)— Diesel-powered stream-lined trains are to be placed in service between Madrid and Hendaye, on the French frontier. They will reach 75 miles an hour and cut the present 12-hour schedule by one-third.

MEXICAN EMISSARY TALKS WITH MORGENTHAU

Washington, Jan. 1 (AP)—Mexico's perturbation at the panicky condition of world silver market was placed before Henry Morgenthau, Jr., secretary of the treasury, Tuesday by Eduardo Saurez, finance minister.

With prices off 15 cents since the treasury quit buying the huge quantities of metal in principal financial centers, the two began a series of conferences which may have an important bearing on the future of silver in the Mexican monetary system.

For nearly an hour they and their aides conferred in Secretary Morgenthau's office. Saurez declined to comment as he left, but Mr. Morgenthau said they had had a "successful talk in preliminary conversations."

Senators from silver-producing states as well as diplomatic and treasury officials will meet the Mexican emissary at a dinner to be given by Secretary Morgenthau tonight.

NEVER MIND THE LADY

by David Garth

NEVER MIND THE LADY JAN 2
SYNOPSIS: Terry Willett is battling fiercely for the sake of Allaire West, who froze him out the last time he saw her. But LaMarr, Terry's victim, is trying to blackmail Allaire's father, lying that the man Allaire shot in a certain tropical port had died. And Allaire has been cheating up on Terry's past, in Carteret, Va., quite innocent of all the trouble and scandal she has caused. LaMarr has lost his revolver, and is fighting hand to hand.

Chapter 33 SURPRISE

Terry turned sideways just in time. LaMarr retreated a few steps and picked up a table lamp. He flung it at Terry's face.

Again Terry was just a split second ahead of him. And always he came on steadily, relentlessly, half-blinded by the blood from the gash in his forehead, but always coming on.

A table went over, a chair was broken. They mixed it in the middle of the floor, LaMarr trying to jab a thumb in Willett's eye, gouging, fighting with fists, nails, teeth, and knees.

But all those tricks had been tried on the tall auburn-haired American at one time or another; some of them had worked once, but never twice.

He weathered the savage, desperate onslaughts with the sheer fury of his iron fists and the spirit that had been born from many fights in many places with all kinds of opponents.

Terry beat LaMarr to his knees. LaMarr's left eyebrow was hanging loose and a cheekbone was shattered. Willett grabbed him by the shoulders and hauled him to his feet. LaMarr sagged helplessly in his grip, his knees buckling, his breath and heart and strength gone.

Willett saw that he was through. He released him and LaMarr sank down and fell over backwards, something crawly and shapeless and half blind.

"That's that," said Willett.

He wasn't in such good shape himself. His head reeled dizzily, one eye was blinded, and his ribs on one side ached from a bruising kick, but LaMarr had learned not to deal with a roughneck.

A roughneck! Yes, it was in her eyes, the eyes of a white-faced girl staring at the scene in that shambled room in horror. Good God! Had his brain been jarred loose from its moorings. Why, she was standing there on the threshold—Allaire West! He must be crazy.

But he wasn't crazy.

"Allaire!" Fox and Rayburne West nearly shouted the name.

The girl looked at the battered thing on the floor and then at the tall man standing nearby with blood streaming over one eye, his face still set in fighting mask.

Disgust and shock and horror. There went the works. Her father was trying to get her attention.

"Where have you been—?"

Her mouth curved briefly.

"If I told you, you wouldn't believe it. I can hardly believe it myself."

Terry Willett looked at her, tilting his head back to clear his vision.

"So you disappeared. Just like that. Just went off without a word, and now you come back and can hardly believe it yourself. Where did you ever get the crazy idea you could do things like that? Or don't you care about the worry and trouble you cause, detectives running around all over the place and people tying themselves in knots trying to find you? But you probably will never see that. You're too used to doing what you want and to hell with everybody else. And now good night, all."

"Wait a minute, Terry!" It was Fox's voice. "You can't go out like that. Your head—"

Attaboy, George, the lamp of reason.

"Mere scratch," said Willett, briefly.

He strode out of the room and out of the house. Outside, he drew a long breath of cool night air. He needed it. Well, that was that, all right. Boy, he'd certainly shot the works.

But what difference did it make? Fox was there—and Fox wasn't a killer or a roughneck—he was a gentleman and a rising young Foreign Officer. He was of her world, born to the purple and when he saw a snake he stepped over it and not on it. Good old Fox.

"Look out, Terry, he's armed!" Fox would die in his bed surrounded by great-grandchildren. The lamp of reason.

Terry was bareheaded and he knew he probably looked as though he'd just returned from the wars, but he hailed a taxi and bore the driver's astonished stare with composure.

"Gosh, Mac, what hit you? Want a doc?"

"Either that or some adhesive tape."

"Get in, boss, get in. I know a good doc."

Terry got in. He leaned back against the cushions and propped his feet up on one of the little side seats.

How are the Giants doing? he murmured.

Bright sun was flooding the room when he awoke the next day. His head felt as though it had been hit with a collection of assorted sandbags. Had he been drunk last night? He pondered. No, he'd been sluggish with something, that was right. A merry life, yea, truly; never a dull moment.

He looked at his wrist watch. Almost noon. Something was due to happen today. Oh, yes—he had to take a plane at Newark Airport for Miami and the Pan-American Airways.

He got up and went over to the mirror where he regarded himself critically. He wasn't exactly a picture of beauty, with a discoloration around one eye and his forehead bandaged with several strips of surgical tape, and when he took a deep breath the ribs on one side ached. Well, don't take any deep breaths.

He showered and dressed quickly. Terry Willett dressed well in an easy natural way. He presented a smart, clean-cut appearance in dark double-breasted, blue shirt, wine-colored cravat, and his thick auburn hair crisply parted.

Then with his bags packed and his topcoat under arm, he paused by the table and picked up Puff Harrington's note. She'd evidently left it there right after he and Fox had gone out of the room last evening. There were two words hurriedly scrawled, "Thanks, Terry." Sic transit Puff.

You're welcome, babe. It didn't cost you anything but a cigarette case. Some detective's wife has that "evidence" now probably. He smiled slightly and tore the note into bits, letting the pieces filter through his fingers.

As he closed the door behind him and turned the key in the lock, he heard his home ring. He hesitated a moment; who'd be calling him? Puff, maybe?

Well, whoever it was he didn't think it worth the effort to unlock the door and go back. What was the use? He let the phone ring. Terry Willett wanted to get away from here.

He had a short breakfast and then went to the desk to pay his bill. The phone girl said there'd been a call for him; no message. The party had been very eager to locate him and the phone girl had said Mr. Willett was leaving for Newark Airport shortly.

"Hope you have a nice trip, Mr. Willett," she smiled. She was very pretty and lots of men stopped by to talk about the telephone situation. It was just her luck that when one came along with whom she'd have liked to discuss the telephone situation, he wasn't interested in the telephone situation.

Black eye and bandaged brow, but that warlike-looking young man was a real gent, though the telephone girl.

Willett arrived at the airport and the big tri-motored ship was already waiting, the sun shining on its silver body with a flood of gleaming reflections. The Miami plane! Coming Corigan.

With his foot on the step, he heard his name called.

"Terry—!"

He turned to see Allaire coming toward him swiftly. She seemed breathless and there was a touch of high color in her face. She reached his side and put a hand on his arm.

"You're not going, Terry? Not back to South America?"

He looked at her curiously.

"Why, of course."

"You might have come around to say good-bye."

He laughed shortly.

"I said good-bye last night—words and music."

"Let's get out of here," said Allaire, as a portly passenger waited impatiently to get aboard.

"Five minutes, sir," said the plane steward to Willett.

"More than enough," said Willett, and walked to one side. Allaire seemed to have something to say, but couldn't quite say it.

"If it's about last night," said Willett, "forget it."

"Oh, Terry, you can't go like this after all you've done. I wanted to talk to you last night, but you didn't give me a chance. It was grand of you to take my part, to sock that beastly swine."

W. W. LIGGETT'S WIDOW CHARGES CRIMINAL LIBEL

St. Paul, Jan. 1 (AP).—A warrant, charging criminal libel of the memory of Walter W. Liggett, slain Minneapolis publisher, against Henry G. Teigan, editor of the Minnesota Leader, and the publication itself was issued in municipal court Tuesday.

M. F. Kinkad, Ramsey county attorney, sought the warrant at the request of Mrs. Edith Liggett, widow of the crusading publisher. Liggett was shot to death near his home the night of December 9. Isadore (Kid Cann) Blumenfeld, Minneapolis liquor salesman, is held for trial January 20.

The warrant charged the alleged libel occurred in the Minnesota Leader, weekly published by the Farmer-Labor Association, dated December 28 in a news story purported to "unmask" an attack by Liggett on Governor Floyd B. Olson and the farmer-labor party.

ON THE Right Foot

TOO MANY of the New Year's resolutions we make are negatives—"don'ts"—silly to begin with, and impossible to keep.

Yet the impulse to make the new year better than the old one is almost irresistible when we face the clean expanse of a fresh calendar.

Let's get off on the right foot this year. Let's combine our ambition with common sense. There are things we can do—constructive, positive things—that will make 1936 a year we can be proud of. One of them is to live within our budgets.

That doesn't mean skimping and doing without. It means deciding on our needs and getting the most for what we pay.

Resolve now to buy wisely—to read the advertisements in this newspaper regularly—to know in advance what you can afford to buy and where to buy it. Compare prices and values in the advertising pages first. Make every dollar do more. Then step forward into 1936 with assurance.

Today's Talk

—By George Matthew Adams—

THIS OLD HEART OF OURS

I READ a most interesting article recently about the human heart. Nothing matters if it gets unruly—or stops! I read that more people are dying from heart trouble than anything else—far more.

Everything evelves about this heart of ours. It's the most highly organized machine in the world—and yet, the simplest in action. It never rests, excepting that fraction of a second between beats—and it beats night and day, often for a hundred years and more.

It has a boss, however. The human brain rules the heart and has the say as to its conduct and life. Expert physicians, who have studied this heart of people for years, and know its every movement and all of its troubles, say that rest and relaxation, and freedom from undue excitement, anger, and over-exertion, is the secret of its long life and efficiency.

The late "Billy" Sunday's heart had been enlarged more than twice its normal size from his strenuous exertions upon the platform. Sandow, the famous strong man, died in middle life after an unusual strain upon his heart. His muscles were stronger than that most valuable of all organs.

Gallens upon gallons of blood are pumped through this small organ day and night, year in and year out. It's the most faithful organ in the human body—and it absorbs a terrible amount of punishment without complaint. There is a limit, however, to this punishment. It often revolts without a moment of warning.

Clean, wholesome living, fresh air and sunshine, and a happy outlook upon life do more to prolong the life of the heart than anything else.

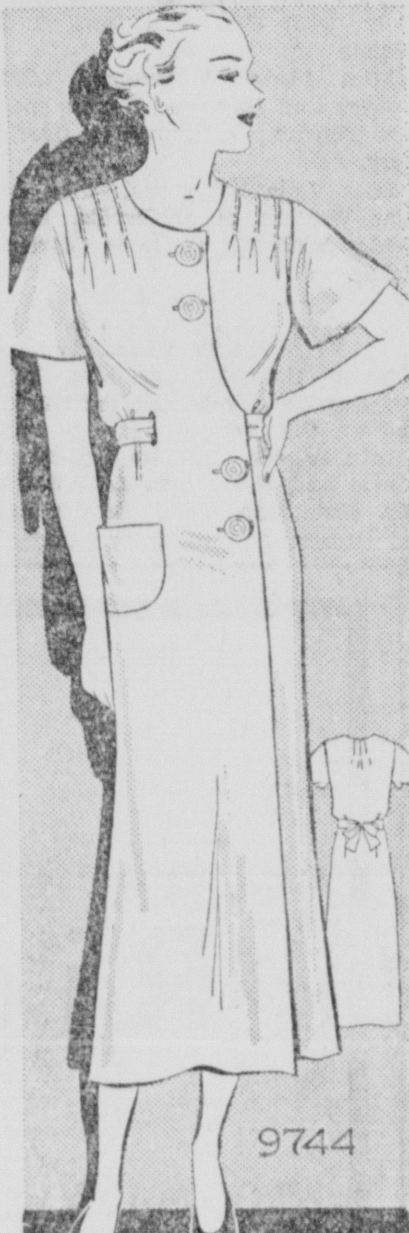

Worry is one of the heart's worst enemies. Overeating is another enemy. A body that becomes clogged with poison throws a heavy burden upon the heart, putting it to extra trouble, and robbing it of its regular routine.

Be kind to your heart. Give it daily consideration. It's your best bodily friend.

YOU CAN SEW THIS YOURSELF

Wrap Around Frock An All Day Standby Says Marian Martin

PATTERN 9744

When you button yourself into this trim wrap-around frock, tie the adjustable sash into a neat bow—you know you're set for the entire day. It's so comfy, you almost forget you have it on, yet you're conscious of the fact you look your best to receive an unexpected caller, to dash out to market or to a neighbor's. It's such an easy frock to make, you can run it up in a morning, and such a timesaver, too, you'll be wanting several changes, and don't feel they must be in white, for pastels and prints will be equally charming. Given a good lap-over in front, it's one wrap-around that won't unwrap under stress and strain, and one that doesn't require a slip. Even a forty-six can wear it and look slim. Complete, diagrammed Marian Martin sew chart included.

Pattern 9744 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34 and 36. Size 16 requires 4 1/2 yards 36-inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

Be sure to send for Our New Pattern Book and see how easily your Spring wardrobe can reflect the latest fashions! Dozens of smart models for every occasion—some sketched, some photographed. Lovely new fabrics and how to make best use of them. New costume accessories. Smart slenderizing styles. Clothes budget hints. Patterns for the whole family. Price of book fifteen cents. Book and a pattern together, twenty-five cents.

Simplicity Of Marian Martin Frock Invites Junior To Make Her Own

PATTERN 9612

Pret young Junior misses will go into raptures over this newest two-piece fashion. Give daughter the pattern and material for it, and see if she isn't eager to make it up herself. Any Junior who's old enough to wear it, is old enough to make it, for it's really very simple, using the Marian Martin sew chart as a guide. There's a captivating blouse with drop-shoulder yoke and sleeves that puff ever so gently at the elbow. Buttons down the front mean it goes on in a jiffy. The skirt's a simple one, with kick-pleat to the fore, and she'll find it grand to wear with a variety of sweaters and blouses. Any diagonal weave woolen, a wool-appearing cotton or challis, would be nice. Complete, diagrammed Marian Martin sew chart included.

Pattern 9612 may be ordered only, in sizes 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18. Size 12 requires 2 1/2 yards 54-inch fabric and 1/2 yard 5-inch ribbon.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

Sights and Sounds

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood—Not exactly superstitious is Marian Marsh as she emerges, butterfly like, from the chrysalis of drab film roles and begins her "second career." No, not exactly.

There is, however, the matter of the little gold ring she always wears on the little finger of her left hand. It was missing the other day, for the first time in seven years, being in the repair shop—and its absence brought forth the story:

Lucky Ring

"I always think that as long as I have that ring I shall have my film work," she said, "and that if I lost it or stopped wearing it there would be a change. Someone—I can't tell you who it was—gave it to me just as I was beginning in pictures. If I hadn't gone into pictures, I should have gone on to college and probably had an entirely different life. Because I got the ring just then, I think it goes with pictures."

And then there are fortune-tellers. Marian hastened to explain that fortune-tellers are "fun"—but it is strange, she thinks, how many things they can tell one that do turn out as predicted. There is Wanda, who tells fortunes at the Assistance League, and who foretold, says Marian, that she was going to England to make pictures—which she did—what predicted that Marian would soon win an important part—which she did in "Crime and Punishment"—and that Marian would get away for a little trip—which she did recently, to San Francisco.

And the Turkish fortune-teller who read her hand in London—that was untarnished. She was ready to sail for home, but the seer said she would "cross the water" and come back for another picture immediately, all of which sounded preposterous. But she met Producer Paul Kohner, who suggested she go to Switzerland and play opposite Luis Trenker in "The Prodigious Son." She crossed the channel instead of the Atlantic, made the picture, and in England again homeward-bound, she made another.

"I suppose I'm good material for fortune-tellers," she said, laughing. "Not that I really believe in it, but it is fun. And I do believe in premonitions—I've had something tell me to pass up what seemed a more attractive contract in favor of another, and soon it worked out for the best."

Marian considers "Crime and Punishment" marks the beginning of her "second career." Her role in "Svengali" opposite John Barrymore marked the high point of her first, and the new Von Sternberg picture she feels certain has opened new doors. Already she has had the youthful lead with Ruth Carter in "No More Yesterdays," the role that gave her, for the first time in pictures, really fine and beautiful clothes to wear—and after seven years of movie drabness she is revealing in it.

But superstitious? "Well, there are one or two things I'm superstitious about—like walking under

TANKER EMBARKS WITH GASOLINE FOR ITALY

The Italian tanker Stelvio is shown being loaded at San Pedro, Calif., with 75,000 barrels of gasoline, destined for Genoa, Italy. It was not learned if the gas was to be used for military purposes. It was the first Italian tanker to dock at San Pedro in several years. (Associated Press Photo)

HAPPY NEW YEAR

A Happy New Year! That's a wish for a day.
So let mine run from now to December.

If ever must happiness hurry away
May it leave you with much to remember.

May you have the price which the tradesman may ask
For whatever you need when you view it.

And may you have the strength for the difficult task
And the knowledge and patience to do it.

May joy at your doorway each morning appear
And may Plenty come, proven-der bringing.

May you know 'tis a friend when the doorbell you hear
And not some collector who's ringing.

May your fireplace know never the gloom of wet logs,
And may care and despair never find you.

Wherever you go may the best of all dogs,
Good Luck, follow closely behind you.

May friendships be lasting and enmities brief,
May your relatives grow to be wealthy.

May your ships come to port without striking a reef,
May you live just as long as you're healthy.

May you learn to eat eggs without spitting your vest,
May your repairs always be snappy.

And in spite of the cares by which all are distressed
May you manage somehow to be happy.

THE LADY AND THE TRAMP
The naughty lady tossed her head.
"Such filthy rags to wear!" she said.
"In all my days I've never seen
A man so horribly unclean.
Have you no single shred of pride?"
"I'm just a tramp," the man replied.
"I must confess my garments frayed
Are not as nice as tailor-made;
But beggars cannot pick and choose.
They search the rubbish heaps for shoes

And coats and vests and I submit
'Tis hard to find a perfect fit.
"Hope not a well-dressed tramp to see
For, lady, that can never be.
In vain we search the rubbish piles
For perfect fits and latest styles,
Or nobly shade of blue and gray;
But suits like that aren't thrown away.

"Of coats discarded never one
I've found with all the buttons on.
In all the years I've yet to find
A blue serge suit with satin lined.
So tramps will never dress in style
Till fashion decks the rubbish pile."

New Books

By JOHN SELBY

It would be difficult for anybody who frequents bookstores to overlook the current revival of interest in the dance. Nijinska's sensational biography of her husband, Haskell, "Diaghileff," and some less pretentious books such as Irving Deakin's "To the Ballet" are the witnesses, staring from every shelf.

There is a new one this week by Lincoln Kirstein, the wealthy young man who helps with the American Ballet, who edited "Hound and Horn" for seven years, who published a pretty good novel and some nice verse, who lectures on the dance in the theater—and that's enough about him.

His book is called "Dance: A Short History of the Development of the Dance" (Putnam). It is, like its author, perfectly serious. It is also a fully documented critical history of the dance from its beginnings in prehistoric times down to this year 1935, and one of the most valuable books on the subject now in print, at least in English.

It answers many questions, such as the sneering one about the dignity of the profession. All the great names in dancing may be found in it, with enough about their owners to satisfy all but the most minutely demanding. All the movements are discussed and evaluated, and some of the critical opinions vouchsafed will stimulate controversy. The illustrations are beautifully chosen, the chronological table is valuable, and there is even a list of photograph records, useful for dancing.

The book is, in short, a further product of the modern cult of the body, and those of us who believe that our decreasing false modesty is a cheering sign will (in Woolcottish phrase) "beat the drums for it."

Thumbnail Reviews

"Reindeer Trek," by Allen Roy Evans (Coward-McCann): a novel-ized version of the famous reindeer drive across the frozen north.

"Arnold Bennett's Letters to His Nephew" (Harpers): the novelist in a new role, not always one which shows him a great man, but a legitimate and homely and pleasant addition to the record.

"Seven League Boots," by Richard Halliburton (Bobbs-Merrill): Dicky has some new adventures, including that masterpiece of futility, his elephant ride over the Alps.

"The Face of Mother India," by Katherine Mayo (Harpers): nearly 400 pictures, and 50,000 words of text amplifying Miss Mayo's famous "Mother India"; Miss Mayo just will not conform to the wishes of our Yogi-minded seekers after the "wisdom" of India.

"More Zest For Life," by Donald A. Laird (Whittlesey): inspiration. "A Child's Story of the Animal World," by Edward G. Huey (Reynolds & Hitchcock): a grand job of introducing the animal kingdom to young and their parents.

"Cyrus Hall McCormick," by William T. Hutchinson (Appleton-Century): Mr. Hutchinson's monumental biography of the reaper's inventor marches on.

"Ivala," by Peter Freuchen (Furnman): a novel by the celebrated Danish explorer of the Arctic, in which Ivala, the heroine, is drawn from Freuchen's first wife—who was an Eskimo.

AMUSEMENTS

As the tiny confederate who surrounds the Yanks with smiles, astounds them with songs and defeats them with dances, Shirley Temple returns to the screen in "The Littlest Rebel," which comes tonight, Thursday and Friday to the Majestic theatre.

She is supported by a cast which includes John Boles, Jack Holt, Karen Morley and her old tap-dancing friend, Bill Robinson.

The story of "The Littlest Rebel" deals with happenings in Virginia during the Civil war.

WAR HEROES' DAUGHTERS TO CHRISTEN DESTROYERS

Bremerton, Wash., Jan. 1 (AP).—Daughters of two Civil War heroes christened two knife-prowed destroyers Tuesday in the first double launching at the Puget Sound navy yard. The destroyers were named for the late Commodore George Hamilton Perkins and the late Commodore William B. Cushing. Miss Katherine A. Cushing, of Fredonia, New York, rested Monday night at a quaint English-type inn here, suffering a cold and under a doctor's care, but was insistent she would be fit for Tuesday's ceremony. Mrs. Isabel Anderson, World War Red Cross nurse, arrived from Brooklyn, Massachusetts, in a private railroad car to christen the other destroyer—honoring her father, Commodore Perkins. KIPLING'S 70TH BIRTHDAY OBSERVED IN SECLUSION Burwash, Sussex, England, Jan. 1 (AP).—Rudyard Kipling, virtually a recluse, observed his seventieth birthday Monday in this little village on the Sussex Downs. He spent the day in his eighteenth century graystone house with his American-born wife and their daughter. Only a few intimate friends were in, for the writer maintained his policy of rigorously avoiding publicity. Kipling has produced little in the past 10 years. His latest poem was "The King and the Sea," published last July in celebration of King George's silver jubilee. HUNT PEACOCKS TO CLEAR BURGLAR-ALARM MYSTERY New York, Jan. 1 (AP). — Two fugitive peacocks were hunted Monday as suspects in a series of frenzied burglar alarms in the neighborhood of the Central Park zoo. Police suggested the theory that "Richard the Lion Hearted," a proud 20-pound bird, and a hen whom he took with him in fleeing the zoo's bird sanctuary a few days ago, may have caused the burglar alarms by nocturnal pecking at apartment-house windows. The searchers, among whom were police, a squad from the American society for the prevention of cruelty to animals and numerous volunteers, considered the possibility that "Richard" was trying to find his former penthouse home. from a month's visit with her daughter, Miss Gertrude Cease, in Bridgeport, Connecticut. The following spent Saturday with relatives in York: Mrs. Katie Geigley, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Musselman and daughter, Janet, Mrs. Arthur Roth and son, Phillip, all of Orrtanna. The Ladies' aid society of the local Methodist Episcopal church will meet Thursday afternoon, January 2, at the home of Mrs. Dorsey Her-ring, Orrtanna R. 1.

ROOSEVELT REPLIES TO PINCHOT ON RELIEF

Washington, Jan. 1 (AP).—A personal letter has been sent by President Roosevelt to Gifford Pinchot in reply to the former Pennsylvania governor's charge that federal work-relief in Pennsylvania "has been sold into political bondage." With a smile, the president told reporters Monday that his reply would not be made public and did not discuss the question further. At his home here Pinchot acknowledged receipt of the letter, but also declined to make it public. Pinchot made his letter to the president public. ARMY'S OLDEST SOLDIER RETIRED WITH CEREMONY Indianapolis, Jan. 1 (AP).—Sergeant John Hoover, oldest soldier in the United States Army in point of service, was retired at Fort Benjamin Harrison Monday. Belying in looks his 69 years and the hardships of thirty-two years of the tropics, the trenches, and two wars, the veteran stood proudly at attention as the formal order mustering him out of his life's work was read. Then, standing on the reviewing stand surrounded by the highest commissioned officers at the post, the old soldier, struggling to keep the tears back, watched the entire Eleventh Infantry pass before him in tribute to his service. TWO AMERICAN SAILORS SENTENCED IN SPAIN Barcelona, Spain, Jan. 1 (AP).—Two American sailors, Leonard Williams, of Fall River Mills, California, and Frederick Albertson, of Seattle, Washington, were sentenced by an emergency court on Thursday to serve two months and one day and fined 250 pesetas (about $33) each for disorderly conduct. They were also given five extra

MILNE LEAVES JAIL ON BAIL

New York, Jan. 1.—Bail for Caleb J. Milne, 4th, was posted Tuesday by his father and the confessed kidnap hoaxer was released from the federal house of detention, where he had been held since Saturday. The bond was provided by a surety company. Caleb J. Milne, 3d, of Boston, came to the rescue of his son following the announcement by the youth's grandfather, wealthy Caleb J. Milne, Jr., of 6611 Wissahickon avenue, Germantown, Philadelphia, that he would not assist young Milne. The father posted the bond for $7500 with U. S. Commissioner Carrett W. Cotter and a few minutes later two deputy U. S. marshals brought Milne to the federal building from the house of detention, where he had been lodged since his arraignment on a charge of sending a letter demanding $20,000 ransom from his grandfather through the mails. ROUND-WORLD TRIP ENDS ON ICE IN CHESAPEAKE Baltimore, Jan. 1 (AP).—Penniless and suffering from cold and exposure, J. Barton Scattergood, who sailed from Liverpool last July 4 for a voyage in a small ketch around the world, was brought to Baltimore after a narrow escape from death on the ice floes of the Chesapeake Bay. His ketch, a 32-foot craft which weathered Atlantic storms, was caught in an ice jam off Betterton Sunday night and sank. All his money, extra clothing and possessions were lost. A flare, seized from the deck of the sinking ketch, brought two power boats to his aid. The lone voyager was taken aboard the freighter Albany and brought to Baltimore. Hungarian Pigs Swill Wine Tokay, Hungary (AP).—Surplus wine goes to swine in this district. It has been established that wine stimulates the porkers' appetites, causing them to fatten faster.
